

Teague Keeping Commitment to be an Independent Voice for Southern New Mexico

Washington, DC – Congressman Harry Teague is one of the most centrist members of Congress, according to a report released today by National Journal Magazine. The report underscores Congressman Teague's commitment to being an independent voice and his common sense, balanced approach to representing southern New Mexico.

"All my life I've been using common sense and hard work to get things done – whether it was in the oil field, in my small business, or with my family. That is also the approach I take to representing the people of my district – just to get in there and get the work done for the people I represent without getting caught up in all the partisan bickering that slows Washington down," said Congressman Harry Teague. "I am humbled and honored everyday that I represent the people of southern New Mexico and I'll continue to vote for their interests above all others."

National Journal's rating demonstrates that based on his voting record Congressman Teague has kept his commitment to be an independent voice in Washington and to work towards bipartisan, common-sense solutions to create jobs and improve southern New Mexico's economy.

The report also finds that Congressman Harry Teague is the most centrist member of New Mexico's Congressional Delegation.
